Of General Interest

Alis, Bentley and other points in the constituency, have tendered Mr. Puffer congratulations on the independent stand he took on the
A. & G. W. Ry. question in the house last week.

Those forty-seven railway which are to center at Red Deer appear to have pelted out. However, at the present time, Red Deer citizens are in a jubilar frame of mind owing to the fact that the C. P. R. is treating their railway station to a new coat of paint this spring. There's nothing like activity in railway matters to boom a town, and we extend our congratulations to the citizens of our southern suburb, located in L.
I. D. 29-x-6.

That Red Deer News editor is the limit when it comes down to senseless knockings. The last fool brake he made was in his edition of last week when he took Senator Talbot to task for opposing the O. P. R.'s application for an extension of time to continue their work on the Lacombe-Moose Jaw extension. The News man's only idea in saying anything was to take a little crack at the senator.
He did not think of the thousands of homesteaders west of Castor who settled the country on the understanding that the road was to be pushed through quickly, and to whom the continuation of the road at the earliest possible moment is almost a matter of life or death.
Why in the dickens don't they bury up the completion of the non-sense-house at Ponoka?

GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED BY VOTE OF 23 TO 15.

Boyle's Motion of Want of Confidence Does Not Go to House.

The long looked for division in the Local Legislature took place on Thursday night last, and the Government was sustained by a vote of 23 to 15. The vote was taken on an amendment to the A. & G. W. Ry. agreement, and the resolution was as follows:

"Whereas the A. & G. W. Ry. Company was incorporated by Chapter 46 of the statutes of Alberta, 1909, with power when organized, to construct a railway from Edmonton to Fort McMurray, with a branch line from a point at or near the west end of Leo la Biche to the east and thereof.

"And whereas, by Chapter 16 of the said statutes of 1909, the government was given permission and power to guarantee the bonds of said railway company upon such terms and conditions as might be agreed upon between the government and the said company.

"And whereas the president of the said company has expressed by letter to the government a willingness to make certain changes in said contract, and specify in same that the equipment of said road at the time of its completion should equal in value half a million dollars, and that he as president of the said company would agree to leave as a guarantee that said road should be completed, equipped and operated, the sum of one million dollars, the said amount to be retained by the government from the guarantee of the first fifty miles, and held by the government until said road is completed, equipped and operated to the satisfaction of the executive council.

"And whereas a contract was entered into on the 7th day of October, 1909, between the government and the A. & G. W. Ry. way, therefore be it resolved that in the opinion of this house, the proposition of the president of the said company offering to make certain changes in the said contract be accepted, and legalized, and that the said road be hastened to completion with the greatest possible despatch, and that the government endeavor to secure from said company the privilege of retaining said money for a further period of five years after completion, as a guarantee of operation and payment of interest."

Causes of Quebec Bridge Disaster.

An interesting departure from the usual routine of the meetings of the Edmonton Engineering society was provided last week when the members were favored by a lecture on "The Quebec Bridge Disaster," by Walter J. Francis, one of the engineers who were appointed by the government to sit on the Royal commission for the investigation of the cause of the catastrophe.

In introducing the speaker of the evening, President Chalmers, of the society, spoke of the close association of the engineering profession with the waste of the general public, and referred to the gratifying growth of the membership of the Engineering society since its formation a year or so ago.

Mr. Francis explained in opening that he had, since coming to the city, found little time for the preparation of his promised lecture before the society, but his impending departure, which he expected would take place in a few days time, had made it necessary for him to take this date.

In a non-technical manner, for the benefit of the large number of guests present, he then went on to describe the construction of the main principles of bridge construction, especially in relation to the ill-fated structure whose collapse on August 27th, 1907, resulted in the loss of nearly 100 lives, of a few millions of dollars and indefinite delay in the completion of this portion of the National Transcontinental railway.

The lecture was illustrated by a large number of lantern slides showing the bridges in various stages of its construction and views of the wreckage which followed on the disaster.

The span of the bridge which was built on the cantilever principle, was 1,800 feet, the lecturer said, only 1,000 feet greater than that of the famous Forth bridge. An idea of this distance might be gathered by comparison with the distance between the Acme block and the Alberta hotel, which was almost precisely similar. Between the ends of the cantilevers the distance was 675 feet. The contract was let by the Dominion government to the Phoenix Bridge Co. of New York, and was under the care of a subsidiary company in Montreal. One of the most renowned engineers in the world was employed as consulting engineer on the undertaking.

In every detail except one the structure was perfect.

"There was not a sign of faulty material in the construction of the Quebec bridge," said Mr. Francis.

"The steel work was of a more complicated character than that of any other structure in the world and throughout there was not a slip or a misfit. All details were published in the leading engineering papers in the world, and no one noticed the one defect in the bridge construction until after the disaster. The report on the cause of its collapse now forms one of the classic works of the engineering profession, and as a result of the investigation the possibility of similar catastrophe on a greater scale has been averted in New York. No errors of the same sort will ever occur again in engineering experience."

The collapse of the colossal structure was due to the buckling of two steel members on the shore side of the south cantilever. Here the latticing was of the very lightest character, considering the nature of the work, and this point, which would have been a defect in any bridge of the most insignificant character, was entirely overlooked. The two members which buckled in (numbered A9L and A9R), the latter the nearer one to the Montreal side, were not identified as the cause of the failure until after exhaustive examination of the ruins revealed the mechanical forces which had been at work to bring about the bridge's downfall. The member A9R was torn into many pieces, which were subsequently found 70 feet away from the place at which the buckling had taken place. On the day prior to the disaster one of the engineers on the job had, in fact been warned of dangerous tendencies becoming apparent, but his faith in his chief was so great that he refused to consider the objections and proceeded with the work. A man named McLure was on his way from New York to stop the construction at the time when the wreck occurred.

The main pier sustained practically no damage as a result of the collapse, and the steel of which the structure consisted was of so high a grade that although it was subjected to enormous pressure and contortion, the members did not crack or bend, but were drawn into many fantastic shapes by the tensile stresses or lapped over and pressed almost out of recognition.

Tenders for the new construction have, said the lecturer, already been called for, and the work will be resumed in the near future.

The duty of the engineer, he said, was to make a dollar do a dollar's worth of work, and the true engineer was the man who could do satisfactory work for the minimum of cost. The building of a bridge such as that which spans the Forth in Scotland was not difficult if the consideration of cost were lightly taken into account, but modern engineers should aim to gain the highest efficiency at the cheapest rate.

Tariff Conference to Avert Fiscal War.

Although no official advice have been received at Ottawa confirming press despatches from Washington, announcing that Messrs. Emery and Pepper, members of the United States tariff board are coming to Ottawa this week to talk over with the government there the present tariff problem in respect to Canada, on Mar. 21st, Canadian ministers accept the announcement as correct. During the past two weeks there have been many delays in getting official exchanges of opinion between Washington and Ottawa owing to the present anomalous situation whereby Canada has no direct representative in the British embassy at Washington, and all communications have to go through the round about way of official red-tape; the fact that the Canadian government news of the situation at Washington comes first through press despatches, as in the present instance, is an illuminative commentary.

The coming of members of the tariff board to Ottawa will probably result in a general clarifying of the present rather delicate situation without regard to a possible disastrous and far-reaching dislocation of mutual trade interests of two countries consequent upon a tariff war. The Canadian government does not believe that there is anything in Canada's present fiscal policy which constitutes any "undue discrimination" against the United States, but, at the same time if American representatives can make out a case showing that there is any reasonable ground for the assertion that such "undue discrimination" exists, the government there is ready to consider any practicable way out of the difficulty.

But so far, although the lumber and other interests which would suffer severely from any raising of the American tariff against Canada are very anxious that any case for such action should be avoided if at all possible, no one has as yet ventured to assert that Canada should either forego the advantages of the new treaty with France or grant similar concessions to the United States.

Under the American tariff law Canada can get no special tariff concession as compared with other countries. And except on the basis of reciprocal lowering of tariffs the Canadian government will not consider any tariff bargain with the States.

The situation may be thus summed up in brief: The government is disposed to wait quietly while American tariff experts look over the situation from an Ottawa perspective. The government believes they will be able to report to President Taft when they go back to Washington that there is no undue discrimination. Canada believes that common sense, backed by a desire of both governments to avoid any tariff war will finally insure such a finding. And financially the Canadian government proposes to have Canada's own tariff policy, and if her big neighbor to the south under exigency of the new tariff law cannot find a way out of a self-created difficulty, then it is the event of the unlooked for and undesired tariff reprisals on both sides, the government believes that this country will suffer least.

It is not the intention of the government to renew the iron and steel bounties which finally expire at the end of the coming fiscal year. Bounties have now been in force for fourteen years and the government believes that iron and steel industries are now established on a sufficiently firm basis to do without the crutch of an annual subsidy from the federal treasury.

Dividends paid and the increasing output of large industries that have been built up since 1896 are an evidence of this. The total amount paid in bounties last year was: On pig iron, $258,425; on steel, $538,100; and on manufactures of steel, $333,091. Since 1896 the total bounties on iron and steel have amounted to over four million dollars.

Laurier in Favor of Georgian Bay Canal.

"My only regret is that I am not able to say that we are going to commence work tomorrow," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the monster deputation from the Canadian Federation of Boards of Trade and Municipalities, which waited on him, urging the early start and completion of the Georgian Bay ship canal, "but I will be a happy man if, during my regime as premier of Canada, this great work is undertaken."

After Mr. John McKen, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Ottawa, and representing the Amherst Board of Trade, and Mr. Peter White, K. C., Pembroke, Ont., on behalf of the federation, had urged on the government a commencement of the work, Sir Wilfrid replied briefly. The gist of his remarks was to the effect that the present large undertakings of the government prevented the plunging of the country into any further expense.

The N. T. R. and the Hudson's Bay railway were not contested by the Premier in this connection. Regarding the undertaking of the work by a private company he stated that he had not as yet heard of a company that would, independently of the government, undertake the work. All asked that the government guarantee their bonds and this the government was unable to do at the present time.

"But if the resources of the country keep on regaining as they have since the recent financial crisis, I am no reason why we cannot start soon," said Sir Wilfrid amidst applause. The despatches which had appeared in the newspapers from the west stating that the project was not looked upon with favor in that part of the country, he did not believe.

"Some one whose horizon does not extend beyond his own farm, was the instigator of them," said the premier.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley, minister of public works, said that if he could have his way, the project would be undertaken without delay.

Another Dowry Case.

The law providing that widows should get a proportionate share of the estate left by her husband is a good one and the passing of such a law in Alberta will meet with general approval. There is still another case very similar that should be provided for as well. It is the case of the son or daughter who gives up personal advantage and profit to stay with the old folk and look after them in their declining years. It has been often the case that one of the family has thus sacrificed himself or herself for the sake of the parents and yet when the will was read it was seen that this child received no larger share of the estate than did the others who had had no share in the creating and maintaining of the estate. That is not as it ought to be. If parents have no greater sense of justice than the law should step in and say that if it is clear that a son or daughter has thus given up opportunities of wealth and advancement for the sake of keeping the parents then they should have the bulk of the estate. It would be only fair and just.

The Situation in England.

What is happening in England is plain to see. The radical forces are fighting one another in place of the common foe, and baring a miracle they will destroy one another. This is merely an old story retold. The ardent idealist, the temperance which marks the reformer does not lend itself readily to compromise; and times without number in the history of Liberalism the progressive movements have been checked, if not destroyed, by the furious unreason of their supporters. If the Labor members, the Radical wing of the Liberal party and the Nationalists bring about the fall of the Asquith ministry because they object to the foot it put down first in the march forward the resulting debacle will be sudden and overwhelming. The people of Great Britain have given the Progressives a mandate to rule provided they can agree among themselves; but if they cannot the mandate will certainly pass to the Conservatives since the King's government must go on and cannot wait for the adjustment of party feuds.

The cables are giving us much information about what the Nationalists think of the situation, what the Labor members propose to do; but we have heard very little of the situation as it presents itself to the great body of Liberals who support Mr. Asquith.

The latest Westminster Gazette to hand deals with the matter from this view point. It advises the Government to make it plain that it has "no intention of existing for the mere sake of existing," and goes on to say: "In the first place, the object of the Government and of the parties which support it is to fight to win and not to fight to break their own heads. There are for each party several more or less heroic ways of breaking their heads. The Government may refuse to meet Parliament on the ground that it does not hold the guarantees necessary to settle the House of Lords question off-hand. The Labor Party may press the government to concede something—say, a Right-to-Work Bill—which it cannot concede without alienating a large number of its own supporters; the Irish Party may refuse to support the Budget, or even vote against it unless it receives assurances which the Prime Minister is not in a position to give and which, with his present Parliamentary force, he cannot obtain.

"Any one of these operations may be defended by heroic arguments, but all of them end in the breaking of heads and not in the winning of victory. They are all different ways of getting the Government out and getting Mr. Balfour in and dissolving the present Parliament almost as soon as it assembles. If the Irish Party consider this to be in their interest they will do it, and there is no more to be said. But it is the Government's duty, none the less to meet Parliament and give the various forces, which between them constitute a large majority on the dominant issue, an opportunity of coming together and welding themselves into a compact striking force on this issue.

"This it can only do in existing circumstances if it goes straight ahead with the Budget and other urgent financial necessities of the country. A Government cannot disclaim its responsibilities in this respect and remain a Government. A Government, situated as this one is, cannot have the necessary moral force behind it in approaching a great reform unless it has proved itself to have sufficient support to carry on and discharge the normal business of the country. If, therefore, it were tripped up on these essential preliminaries, the inference would be that its following in the present Parliament was not sufficiently solid or sufficiently prepared to make sacrifices for a supreme object to justify an important constitutional change. We cannot imagine a Government which was liable to pressure on this side and that and which could only maintain a precarious existence by yielding to this pressure, developing great power and energy in the struggle between the two Houses.

"For these reasons the Government must take its own line about the Budget and be prepared to accept the consequences, if Mr. Redmond feels obliged to vote against them. All that may be fairly asked on the other side is that Mr. Redmond also should realize the consequences and be prepared to accept them. It is not for us to say whether the Irish Party stand to gain by a breach with British Liberals and the succession to power of another Government which is opposed to their policy and which would endeavor to shift the issue from the House of Lords to some more congenial subject. That is for them to decide; we can only ask that the decision should be taken with full knowledge of its gravity and consequences.

The course thus outlined has been taken by the Asquith Government. They have declared their policy; Budget first; then veto. Their reasons for this are doubtless those set forth in the article which we quoted from the Gazette. Mr. Asquith, by his bold declaration of policy, has taken the position which was once expressed by Sir Robert Peel in these terms: "I have no desire to be Prime Minister of England, but so long as I hold the office of Prime Minister of England I will hold it by no servile tenure." Mr. Asquith having declared himself the Factions must either accept his policy or by defeating his Government destroy themselves as well.

Rockefeller to Donate All His Fortune to Charity.

Washington, D. C., March 2.—A world wide scheme of philanthropy—stupendous in its scope—in which the Rockefeller millions are to be lavished "for the betterment of mankind," is foreshadowed in the bill introduced in the senate today by Mr. Ballinger, of New Hampshire, providing for the incorporation of the "Rockefeller Foundation." Details as to the exact plans of Mr. Rockefeller are looking here aside from the dry phraseology itself. All that is known of the plan is gleaned from the statements made by Mr. Ballinger, after he had presented the bill. "I am not authorized," said he, "to speak for Mr. Rockefeller, but there is no doubt that he proposes to spend his millions. He has already spent $52,000,000 through the general election board. I have no doubt that Mr. Rockefeller intends to give his money away on a scale greater than any other living man. I am not acquainted with all of the details of Mr. Rockefeller's plans."

Senator Ballinger introduced the bill at the request of "some of Mr. Rockefeller's friends." He would not say who they were. The bill was handed to the senate because he is the chairman of the senate committee for the district of Columbia, where the headquarters of the foundation are to be, just as all the big philanthropic foundations have their homes there. The erection of some notable structure in which to house the foundation, especially since the "acquisition and dissemination of knowledge," are set-d among the objects of the foundation. This, however is but an incidental feature for elsewhere in the bill the purpose is set forth of providing "for the prevention and relief of suffering and the promotion of any and all of the elements of human progress."

New York, March 2. The Rockefeller foundation, according to a close associate of John D. Rockefeller, is to receive the entire Rockefeller fortune under the will of the oil magnate. What the sum is, not even Rockefeller himself knows, because of the elastic value of his vast properties.

The most conservative estimate of the amount which will eventually be turned over to the philanthropic work of the oil magnate is $100,000,000. The scope of the Rockefeller foundation has been made unlimited, says the International News Service informant, for the purpose of administering every sort of charity or humanitarian work that cannot be called strictly educational, in which Mr. Rockefeller has ever been interested. The educational work will be cared for by the general educational fund, which was appropriated under the same sort of a charter in 1905. These two funds will be kept absolutely distinct.

"To promote the well being and to advance the civilization of the United States, its territories and its possessions, and of foreign lands," is another striking purpose of the foundation usually conferred on corporations are given the foundation in the Ballinger bill. In fact, it was pointed out today that by the addition of a very few words, the bill, as it was written might well stand as a charter, for what really would be a "good trust," in the meaning of the term.

There are reasons for believing that the bill was prepared by Mr. Rockefeller himself. It is not in the form usually adopted by legislators in drawing a measure. It came to Washington ready for presentation and in that shape was handed to Senator Ballinger.

Swept Away 84 People.

Everett, Wash.—The dead in the Wellington avalanche, based on a list of dead and missing, given out by officers of the Great Northern railroad, may reach a total of 84 before the rescuers reach the bottom of the mass of snow and wreckage that crushed two trains into a gulch. While only eight passengers and nine railroad employees are known to be dead, thirty-eight passengers and 29 employees of the road are missing. Railroad men think few of the missing will be recovered alive if they are buried under the snow.

Although forty-eight hours have passed since the slide, no detailed account of the wreck has been received of what happened. The only stories of the disaster have come from those who crawled over the mountain trail.

Communication with Wellington is maintained only by men on snowshoes. Twelve have been removed from the 150 foot gorge into which the snowslide swept the train. The railroad buskhouse at Wellington has been transformed into a hospital and the injured are being cared for there. Supt. O'Neil, of the G. N., went to the wreck late on Wednesday, at the head of a party of doctors and nurses. The treacherous trip down the precipice was made on snowshoes.

The passengers known to be dead include Frances Starrett and Lillian Starrett, children, of Cheyenne, B. C. Among the passengers missing are: R. H. Belbert, a civil engineer of Seattle, New York and Cuba; A. Boles, Moberly; M. D. Chantrell, of Vancouver; B. U. Matthews, Cincinnati, Ohio; R. C. Thompson, Vancouver, and E. W. Tapping, Ashland, Ohio. In all twenty-eight railroad employees are missing.

Fully nine out of every ten cases of rheumatism is simply rheumatism of the muscles due to cold or damp, or chronic rheumatism, neither of which require any internal treatment. All that is needed to afford relief is the free application of Chamberlain's Liniment. Give it a trial. You are certain to be pleased with the quick relief which it affords. Sold by all dealers.

Talbot and Mr. Gibson have been busy all winter getting out logs, and are going to begin sawing at Mr. Gibson's very soon. Mr. E. A. Dwyer is at present rigging up the sawmill for the purpose. There are also a number of teams hauling logs to Mr. J. Proudfoot's where the mill will be moved after felling at the former place.

Evidently local option campaign speakers have been guilty of using extravagant language in some localities. Rev Beverly Smith, at the Alliance conference, counselled speakers in entering local option fights to avoid being abusive. He told of instances he had noticed of unwise speeches and said that many such extravagant statements were made in contests

The expenditure of four million dollars by the C. P. K. in Alberta should help out some. That means a lot of money spent in wages, supplies and material. That sum added to what the other lines will spend will go a long way toward making Alberta prosperous.

HOW MCGILLIGUDDY SIZED SITUATION

Veteran Editor Waxes Sarcastic Over Affairs at the Capital.

Edmonton, March 3.—The agony is over. That eminent preacher of the gospel of the "New Liberalism" in Alberta, Richard Bedford Bennett, the junior member for Calgary shot his bolt at 23:27 o'clock (prairie time) last night. For the past several weeks an effort had been made by a bunch of political conspirators to wreck the Rutherford administration, and during that time the head-front and consulting actuary was Mr. Bennett, although he posed as merely "an interested outsider."

The time was considered ripe for a coup d'état, and the material was found in a bunch of disgruntled members who were thought to have grievances against the government. Mr. Cushing was seen and was taken up to the high mountain and promised that everything would be his if he would assist in ousting his colleagues. Bennett did not desire to be premier, Cushing could have that and be welcome, but Michener, Red Deer, who had pledged himself to support the Liberal party would be in the cabinet, and, of course, Mr. Boyle, of Sturgeon, and Riley of Gleichen, would hold down portfolios.

All Bennett desired was that he should be master of the administration and consulting actuary and defender of the "New Liberalism" in time of stress and contention, when the rapids were near and there were breakers ahead.

For weeks past the conspiracy had been working overtime, not only on every lawful day but on Sundays included, and the rotunda of the King Edward hotel and the private rooms were the scenes of coming and goings amongst the members who were looked upon as good material and were to be initiated into the mysteries of the "New Liberalism," whose prophet was Bennett.

During that time the air was full of rumors of graft on the part of certain members of the administration and the chiefs in the cause of Abdullah endeavored to impress upon those they desired to be Abdullamites that, during the debate, such exposures would be made on the floor of the house, of incompetency and wrong doing on the part of the Rutherford administration that no clean man would stay near the Augustan stable.

After days passed and although Boyle and Cushing and Riley and Roberts and others spoke no one dared to hint that there had been any malversation or hoodluming on the part of any member of the administration. True on the Friday that Mr. Cushing made his explanation regarding his resignation from the cabinet, he had alluded to the fact that a special train containing members of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway company to finance the project and cited from the good book which he was always pleased to quote: "Where the carcass is there will eagles be gathered also," but he did not dare to couple the name of any member of the government with the quotation. And while he was speaking another special train was on the track between Calgary and Edmonton, and in that train there was an eagle strong in pinion and power who had evidently received another scriptural injunction: "Come over to Macedonia (Edmonton) to help us."

The "New Liberals" apparently were afraid that not one reputation carcass but several would be spread over the floor of the legislature if anything were attempted in the shape of personality unless their newly acquired guide philosopher and friend, Bennett, was on the job. And so that gentleman was forced to pay $152, one plunk a minute, to overtake with a special train the regular train at Red Deer to gain the capital before the vote would be taken that would blot forever the hopes of the "New Liberalism" in Alberta.

But although a dramatic entrance to the chamber was made by Bennett, and Boyle, who was addressing Mr. Speaker and the house, was so taken by surprise that he gasped like a chicken with the pip between a comma and a semi-colon in his speech, the $152 of good money he had blown in his Tam O'Shanter ride was lost for the pyrotechnics did not start that night.

The fireworks display did not start until last evening. Bennett, during the afternoon, began his onslaught on the Government. Like Tam O'Shanter's wife, "He had been nursing his wrath to keep it warm," and for an hour or so in the latter end of the afternoon he delighted a crowded house with a flow of language the legislature had never heard the like of. Bennett is a great speaker, a manipulator of words, and if he could think as rapidly as he talks, would be a marvel in platform oratory. I would not say that he is eloquent and cogent in reasoning, rather he is foxy, but he knows how to tickle the ears of the groundlings, and in an "ad cap standum" speech, has few equals. But like "Single Speech" Hamilton, when you have heard him once, you know what to expect next time, and in every address there is the same appeal to loyalty, to honor, to integrity, to remember what is coming to our sons and our son's sons, and to the generations not yet born, to inherit principles that differentiate right from wrong, which proclaim him to be the defender of the faith as it was transmitted to the political saints, the one man in the country who holds up the pillars of the constitution, the loyalist, politically in whom there is no guile.

After recess he continued his address, and for an hour or two made a good list of it, although he used every art, legal, dramatic, and sophistic, to prove that black was white, and white was no color at all, in so far as the administration was concerned. They were bad from start to finish, according to his say so; there was none of them good, no, not one.

Had he stopped when he was through using minor personalities against the members of the Government, no one could find much fault with him. That was his job, and he had a perfect right to work overtime at it. But when he undertook to state that the men who had received the contract for building the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway were not only men of no account, but were promoters and crooks, who had no intention of building and operating the road, but who merely desired to reach their hand into the provincial treasury with the purpose of looting it, he overstepped all legitimate criticisms and he made statements, practically the privilege of parliament, that he would not dare to make outside of the sacred precincts of the legislative chamber. And Mr. Bennett knows it. There were men in no position to reply to him on the floor of the House, and there is only one word to characterize his action cowardly.

But to use another scriptural quotation, "The rage is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong," and Bennett met his Waterloo when in criticizing his address he made a violent attack upon the attorney-general, and insinuated that that honorable member had been guilty of an attempt at graft in connection with the installation of the automatic telephone service in Calgary.

Bennett had called upon the senior member for Calgary to corroborate his statement, and that honorable gentleman had replied, "It is substantially correct," when Attorney-General Cross rose in his place and denounced the statement as a deliberate lie, and proceeded to show up the mean and contemptible effort of Bennett to stampede the members of the House.

Bennett cowering before the righteous indignation of the attorney-general, immediately accepted the statement of that gentleman, and avoided himself of the protection of Mr. Speaker against the counter attack that was made upon him by Mr. Cross. Not once, but several times, was he forced to say, "I accept the statement of the honorable gentleman," regardless of the fact that in so doing he was leaving the senior member for Calgary, whom he had dragged into the affray, in a most humiliating position.

The latter, like the left bridle-groom in Young Lochinvar, "Said never a word."

That is the story of the man who went out to shear and was shorn. These are the facts in connection with one of the most disreputable attempts that ever was made in a deliberative body in Canada to besmirch an administration, and that it was done deliberately and not on the spur of the moment by Mr. Bennett, was apparent to every one who watched the proceedings from the press gallery.

It had the earmarks of having been rehearsed. The dramatic appeal for corroboration to the senior member for Calgary, which was repudiated by Mr. Bennett later on when he accepted the unqualified denial by the attorney-general, had every appearance of stage effect, and anyone who watched the attitude of Messrs. Hoadley, Michener and Riley, could not but be convinced that the throwing of the bomb was fully expected by them.

The action was not in harmony with the loud profession of honesty, integrity and patriotism that had been the keynote of Mr. Bennett's address earlier in the day, and will stand to the discredit of the junior member for Calgary for ever and a day.

Now that the door is wide open for counter reprimand, it is quite possible that one or more real grafters may be exposed, and a few heretofore bright reputations besmirched before the battle is closed, and it is said the damage will be to the professed New Liberals, of whom Mr. Bennett is the prophet.

In the event of the Calgary Tigers' defeating Macleod tonight, and again assuming that Lacombe will meet with fair success in Strathcona on Friday night, home and home games with the Tigers will probably be arranged for, and the winners of this game would without doubt, be the hockey champions of all Alberta.
